

Day 5, 29 April 2015

Kokerboomkloof and surroundings, 10km, 2h

Today we have a bit of an off day. We slept late, till 7:30. Due to the fact that it is so far west in South Africa the sun only rises at this time. 7:00 the stars is still shining. Because this is the only non-travel day on our trip we decided to make a nice breakfast. I bought a Voetspore cook book a while back and did some of these recipes on this trip. We made bobotie the previous evening and for this morning we made a Frittata.

Breakfast

Nina and I also took a bit if a stroll while the sun was rising.

Morning stroll

Most of the other campers left today and by 11:00 we had the whole of campsite 3 to ourselves. We had a nice bath with water that we had to heat on the gas stove and a bucket we brought along for this. We had water in the taps at all the campsites and flushing toilets that were clean and in working order. The facilities were very clean and could be used without any problems. I also had the water on the roof that we could use for this. We had 20℔ off drinking water with us too.

After cleaning and feeling a bit fresher we had a drive to the lookout points. This was actually more so that Nina can sleep in the air-conditioned car. It was getting hot now and the tent was too hot to sleep in.

Lookout over Springbokvlakte.

Lookout number 2

Some rock on the way back from lookout no. 2

Nina was still sleeping when we got back from the lookouts so we continued through the campsite at Kokerboomkloof and drove down the kloof. Here we had a very nice sighting of a Klipspringer family.

Klipspringer family.

While returning Nina woke up from her sleep and we enjoyed the silence in the kloof. We had a braai again the evening and I had to take some night photos again.

Kokerboom at night

Our fire and braai

My wife and I enjoying a coffee.

You can see the stars in the pictures and the only light that was used was from the fire and the moon.